Uncovering opportunity worldwide

Benefitting from developing economies

No longer considered a 'niche asset class', developing economies are benefiting from stronger governance and improved economic management.

We are optimistic about the long-term growth prospects for emerging markets, and we strongly believe in taking a selective approach to investing in companies. We believe that the combination of secular growth opportunities, franchise sustainability, visionary management, and valuation discipline lays the foundation for strong long-term investment returns.

Investing in the world’s fastest growing economies

The numbers say it all. Growth is fastest in the emerging economies distinguished by a rising consumer class, structural government reforms and a mix of well run businesses.

A timely opportunity

Not only is there attractive growth opportunity, but emerging markets also look inexpensive relative to developed U.S. markets. Using market indexes as proxies, the chart below shows estimated longer term growth combined with valuation metrics tend to favor emerging markets.

Active management matters
Know what you own and why. Our approach to emerging market equity underscores the importance of fundamentally driven, active management. There tends to be a lot of “noise” in the press over emerging market macro-level concerns such as geopolitical instability, currency market movements, and so on, that affects markets and leads to mispricing of securities. Our research aims to cut through the noise to determine the real drivers of a company’s financial results.

Investing involves risk, including the possible loss of principal.

International investments entail risks not ordinarily associated with U.S. investments including fluctuation in currency values, differences in accounting principles, or economic or political instability in other nations. Investing in emerging markets can be riskier than investing in established foreign markets due to increased volatility and lower trading volume. • Investments in small and/or medium-sized companies typically exhibit greater risk and higher volatility than larger, more established companies. • The risk that local political and economic conditions could adversely affect the performance of a fund investing a substantial amount of assets in securities of issuers located in a single country or a limited number of countries.

Index performance returns do not reflect any management fees, transaction costs, or expenses. Indices are unmanaged and one cannot invest directly in an index. The MSCI Emerging Markets Index represents large- and mid-cap stocks across emerging market countries worldwide. The index covers approximately 85% of the free float-adjusted market capitalization in each country. Index “gross” return approximates the maximum possible dividend reinvestment. Index “net” return approximates the minimum possible dividend reinvestment, after deduction of withholding tax at the highest possible rate. The Morningstar Diversified Emerging Markets Category compares funds that tend to divide their assets among 20 or more nations but tend to focus on the emerging markets of Asia and Latin America rather than on those of the Middle East, Africa, or Europe. These funds invest predominantly in emerging market equities, though some invest in both equities and fixed income investments from emerging markets. The MSCI EAFE (Europe, Australasia, Far East) Index represents large- and mid-cap stocks across 21 developed markets, excluding the United States and Canada. The index covers approximately 85% of the free float-adjusted market capitalization in each country. The S&P 500 Index measures the performance of 500 mostly large-cap stocks weighted by market capitalization, and is often used to represent performance of the US stock market. The Morningstar US Large Blend Category compares funds that are fairly representative of the overall US stock market in size, growth rates, and price. Stocks in the top 70% of the capitalization of the US equity market are defined as large cap. The blend style is assigned to portfolios where either growth or value characteristics predominate. These funds tend to invest across the spectrum of US industries, and owing to their broad exposure, the funds’ returns are often similar to those of the S&P 500 Index.
